INTRODUCTION

A COLLECTION OF THE WORLD'S FINEST IRISES

This is a preliminary listing of only the choicest Irises in cultivation. While some of the varieties listed are moderately priced, they are of such superior character as to justify their being listed in a collection of The World's Finest Irises. All inferior varieties have been eliminated.

RATINGS—The figures given before each variety are the ratings given by the Jury appointed by the American Iris Society in 1921. Those not rated are varieties that have been originated since the ratings were given by the American Iris Society. The highest rating (9.6) was given to Lent A Williamson.

9.5 is considered almost perfect.

9.0 very fine

8.5 fine

8.0 very good.

7.0 good.

6.0 good but not outstanding.

5.0 fair.

Below 5.0 poor.

Notice the uniformly high ratings given to the varieties listed in this catalogue and the absolute lack of poorly rated varieties.

ORIGINATOR—The name of the originator is given, either in full or abbreviated, after each variety, together with the year introduced.

PRICES—The prices quoted are for single rhizomes. Six of one variety may be had at the price of five. Cash should be sent with the order, by check or money order preferred.

PLANTING—The best time for transplanting Irises is after they are through flowering in July or August. Prices quoted in this catalogue are for shipment at that time. The varieties offered are perfectly hardy and will bloom anywhere if given some sun. Do not plant too deep. The best method is to plant so that the rhizome or fleshy part of the root, is just level with the ground. A light covering of leaves or straw, or rough trash is beneficial the first winter, especially if they are planted late in the fall, to prevent the frost from throwing them out of the ground. After the first year they require no attention excepting to divide them every three or four years. Avoid manure and over-watering. Bone meal is an aid to flowering.

The World's Finest Irises

YOU ARE INVITED

to stroll through my gardens any time and as often as your time and inclination permits, but especially during the month of June, when, at various times during the month, about three hundred varieties of Irises will be found blooming, including many varieties not listed here. In addition to this fine collection of Irises, you will also find in bloom during the same month, a collection of the World's Finest Peonies, a very fine collection of hardy climbing roses and many other beautiful and interesting flowering plants.
